

What is delegated management?

Delegated investment management combines strategic advice and implementation. Typically, a mandate involves the ongoing management of most or all of the assets of a pension or endowment fund, managed to an objective and risk level set by the plan sponsor or pension committee.

Figure 1. Good investment governance and organizational design make a difference

Source: Ambachtsheer, K., 'How Much is Good Governance Worth?',
The Ambachtsheer Letter 245, KPA Advisory Services Ltd., June 2006

Research has demonstrated a connection between investment governance and investment success. Keith Ambachtsheer suggests that the good/bad governance gap could be worth 1% to 2% of additional return each year.* (Figure 1)

So it's logical that governance should guide the investment process. While some pension funds have adopted simple, passive equity and bond portfolios that require a lower level of specialist knowledge and time to maintain, others have attempted to build more sophisticated portfolios in pursuit of better risk-controlled returns.

Either approach may be appropriate, but to maximize the chances of success, we believe the governance approach must match the fund strategy.

*Ambachtsheer, K. "How Much is Good Governance Worth?" The Ambachtsheer Letter 245, KPA Advisory Services Ltd. June 2006

Closing the governance gap: To build or buy?

For those who seek to improve the risk/return trade-off from their equity and bond portfolios, there are generally two options to enhance investment governance: build or buy. Pension funds can either build an in-house team or delegate to a specialized third party.

Building an internal team can offer attractive benefits. However, for many, it is simply not a realistic solution, as only the largest pension funds have sufficient scale to make this a genuinely viable option.

For pension funds that can't build internally, delegated investment management can help close the gap between the need for efficient investment strategies, real-time decision making and the typically constrained governance budget of a pension fund committee.

Potential benefits of delegated management

While it may seem that plan sponsors that opt for delegated investment management are taking a step back, we believe this is not the case. In fact, one of the most frequently cited potential benefits of delegated investment management is that plan sponsors or committee members have more time to focus on key strategic issues and long-term goals for their endowment or pension plan. The plan sponsor retains accountability for the investment strategy (overall risk and return) and works with the delegated manager to determine key parameters, such as the time horizon, return and risk. The delegated manager, working with the plan sponsor, then executes the investment strategy separating the governance and execution functions.

Monitoring also becomes less of a burden on the plan sponsor as the delegated manager relationship replaces numerous relationships with investment managers and potentially other service providers.

This document was prepared for general information purposes only and does not take into consideration individual circumstances. The information contained herein should not be considered a substitute for specific professional advice. In particular, its contents are not intended by Towers Watson Investment Services, Inc., and its parent, affiliates, and their respective directors, officers, and employees ("Willis Towers Watson") to be construed as the provision of investment, legal, accounting, tax or other professional advice or recommendations of any kind, or to form the basis of any decision to do or to refrain from doing anything. The information included in this presentation is not based on the particular investment situation or requirements of any specific trust, plan, fiduciary, plan participant or beneficiary, endowment, or any other fund; any examples or illustrations used in this presentation are hypothetical. As such, this document should not be relied upon for investment or other financial decisions and no such decisions should be taken on the basis of its contents without seeking specific advice. Willis Towers Watson does not intend for anything in this document to constitute "investment advice" within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. § 2510.3-21 to any employee benefit plan subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act and/or section 4975 of the Internal Revenue Code.

This document is based on information available to Willis Towers Watson at the date of issue, and takes no account of subsequent developments. In addition, past performance is not indicative of future results. In producing this document Willis Towers Watson has relied upon the accuracy and completeness of certain data and information obtained from third parties. This document may not be reproduced or distributed to any other party, whether in whole or in part, without Willis Towers Watson's prior written permission, except as may be required by law.

Views expressed by other Willis Towers Watson consultants or affiliates may differ from the information presented herein. Actual recommendations, investments or investment decisions made by Willis Towers Watson, whether for its own account or on behalf of others, may differ from those expressed herein.

For pension funds that can't build internally, delegated investment management can help close the gap between the need for efficient investment strategies, real-time decision making and the typically constrained governance budget of a pension fund committee.

About Willis Towers Watson

Willis Towers Watson (NASDAQ: WLTW) is a leading global advisory, broking and solutions company that helps clients around the world turn risk into a path for growth. With roots dating to 1828, Willis Towers Watson has 45,000 employees serving more than 140 countries and markets. We design and deliver solutions that manage risk, optimize benefits, cultivate talent, and expand the power of capital to protect and strengthen institutions and individuals. Our unique perspective allows us to see the critical intersections between talent, assets and ideas – the dynamic formula that drives business performance. Together, we unlock potential. Learn more at willistowerswatson.com.

willistowerswatson.com/social-media

Copyright © 2019 Willis Towers Watson. All rights reserved.
WTW-NA-2019-WTW301647

willistowerswatson.com

Willis Towers Watson